President's Letter

Dear Members and Friends,

Last month, my letter talked about a few of the adventures that I would be experiencing in my stay in Arizona. Here is the report on two of them.

The first was the 24th Cochise Cowboy Poetry and Music Gathering in Sierra Vista. A partnership in education by the Western Heritage Outreach Program, this poetry contest is open to all elementary, middle and high school students in Cochise County and boasts of over 2,000 submissions for this year's theme of "Outlaws and Lawmen." The winners participate in a concert alongside professional musicians reading their poems that are also published in a booklet entitled Saddlebag of Poems.

Throughout the three-day event, there are multiple poetry, music and living history presentations. Some of the professional western musicians participating this year were G.T. Hurley, Mike Mouton, Joyce Woodson, Sam DeLeeuw, Barry Ward and the Red Hot Rhythm Rustlers. Today's Western music encompasses a wide variety of musical styles such as folk ballads, jazz, blue grass, boogie-woogie and gospel. What makes the music "western" is the content, the apparel of the performer and of course most important, a guitar.

The second big adventure was attending the Tubac Festival of the Arts. You see Tubac lies half way between Tucson (home of the University of Arizona) and Mexico. The town's motto is "Where Art and History Meet." It was established as a Presidio in 1752, under the old Spanish Empire, became part of Mexico, and later was part of the territory and then the State of Arizona.

The Festival which has been held for over 50 years, lasts for five days and has nearly 250 artisan participants from southern California, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado and New Mexico. Some of various media include ceramic and pottery, wood carving, stone work, jewelry, wearable art, metal work, fired stone, leather working, pottery, oil painting, and ink and pencil sketching.

Come and join us at the CCAA ArtsFest, La Plata Town Hall, Saturday, June 11, from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm. "Where Music, Art and Culture Combine!"

Arts Alliance Delegation Attends Maryland Arts Day

Hundreds Join Together to Encourage Legislators to Approve Funding for the Arts in Maryland

All signs pointed to a great event in Annapolis for Maryland Arts Day on Wednesday, February 17, 2016. The previous day, the Charles County Arts Alliance (CCAA) received a press release (see Page 9) from Governor Hogan stating that he had proposed a record-breaking budget for Maryland Arts of $20.3 million for FY 2017.

"The arts are not only an important economic generator in Maryland, they are also essential to educating our children, spurring creativity and innovation, and maintaining our overall quality of life," said Governor Hogan. "The First Lady and I have a deep connection to the arts and believe an investment in the arts is an investment in Maryland's future."

In anticipation of more good things to come, CCAA Board members, President Robert Rausch, Vickie Markel, Kathy Jenkins; CCAA members Cindi Barnhart, Roy Jenkins; and CCAA Office Manager, Judy Crawford joined hundreds of Maryland arts advocates at St. John's College. John Schratwieser, Executive Director of Maryland Citizens for the Arts served as Master of Ceremonies for the morning. Among the numerous elected officials who greeted us, First Lady Yumi Hogan, a professional artist, welcomed us, spoke about the importance of the arts, and opened the event. Continued on Page 5

First Lady of Maryland Yumi Hogan gave an opening message.

Two professional artists presented their messages of advocacy through their art. Herbert D. Massie of Baltimore Clayworks was the 2016 awardee of the Sue Hess Maryland Arts Advocate of the Year. For over 25 years he has used his art to promote healing and community building with students, senior citizens, the disabled, and people in addiction recovery.

Keynote Speaker Navasha Daya with her accompanist.

The keynote speaker, Navasha Daya, a performing artist, songwriter, and co-founder of the Youth Resiliency Institute, has performed with international and national musicians. She sang a song by Miriam Makeba, and spoke about the value of cultural and spiritual wellness.

Next, we were presented with information about the current state budget and legislative talking points.

In a handout prepared by the Maryland Department of Commerce, we learned that $3.20 is generated for every $1.00 spent in arts operating budgets -- a 3:1 return. Also, we learned that $646 million contributed to direct spending into the economy from arts organizations. All of the figures in the Economic Impact Numbers gave us the material we needed for our meetings.

Finally, we were directed to rooms to get box lunches and drinks for our state legislators so we could eat lunch with them. Our goal was to request support for the Governor's proposed arts budget and to ensure that the monies in the Preservation of Cultural Arts account be made permanent. The Southern Maryland group met with St. Mary's, Calvert, and Charles County legislators. Senator Thomas (Mac) Middleton and Delegate Edith Patterson met with us in the Southern Maryland Conference Room. Delegates C.T. Wilson and Sally Jameson met in their offices as committee meetings conflicted with their meeting schedule.

With our messages delivered, we headed home pleased with the outcome of our day and looking forward to continued support for Maryland and Charles County Arts.

State Issues Press Release Announcing Proposed Budget Plans Good News Received the Day Before Maryland Arts Day 2016

BALTIMORE, MD (February 16, 2016) – Demonstrating his continued commitment to the arts in Maryland, Governor Larry Hogan has proposed a record-setting $20.3 million FY 2017 budget for the Maryland State Arts Council, an agency within the Maryland Department of Commerce that works to encourage and invest in the arts for all Marylanders. The Governor included a $700,000 increase for MSAC in his FY 2017 budget and will also introduce a measure to permanently transfer $2 million from the Special Fund for the Preservation of Cultural Arts to the Arts Council's annual appropriation.

“The arts are not only an important economic generator in Maryland, they are also essential to educating our children, spurring creativity and innovation, and maintaining our overall quality of life,” said Governor Hogan. “The First Lady and I have a deep connection to the arts and believe an investment in the arts is an investment in Maryland’s future.”

The proposed additional funds would have a significant impact by providing a boost in operating support to hundreds of Maryland arts organizations and programs, community development grants to local arts councils in all 24 jurisdictions, and expanded arts education programming for Maryland students, along with other program priorities.

“The arts in Maryland represent hundreds of nonprofit organizations operating as small businesses that build and add vibrancy to their community. As publicly-funded arts organizations, we take seriously our responsibility to serve the communities we represent,” said April Nyman, Executive Director of the Arts Council of Anne Arundel County. “Maryland has a long history of support for the nonprofit arts sector. I applaud Governor Hogan for raising the bar with this extraordinary investment and, in turn, creating new opportunities to better serve the citizens of Maryland.”

Tomorrow, more than 400 arts advocates will meet in Annapolis for Maryland Arts Day 2016. Presented by the Maryland Citizens for the Arts, the group will highlight the contributions of the arts to Maryland’s economy and meet with members of the General Assembly to encourage support for the governor’s budget. First Lady Yumi Hogan will be among the speakers, along with members of the General Assembly, Maryland Commerce Secretary Mike Gill, and leaders in the arts community.

An economic impact study released by the Arts Council in November 2015 shows that Maryland arts organizations generated $646 million in direct spending and had a total economic impact of $1.03 billion in FY 2014. In addition, the organizations created 12,155 full-time equivalent jobs and generated $48.3 million in state and local taxes.
